Source: Food & Nutrition Education in Communities (FNEC), Cornell University
Serving size: 2 Tbsp Servings per recipe: 18

This is the traditional take on this Middle Eastern dish--it's loaded with nutrients such as protein, fiber, iron, and magnesium, and is a delicious snack served with sliced vegetables or whole wheat pita.

Ingredients

- 1 clove garlic, peeled
- 3 Tbsp lemon juice
- 1/2 tsp salt
- 1 15-ounce can drained chickpeas (also called garbanzo beans)
- 4 Tbsp water
- 3 Tbsp peanut butter or tahini **
- 1/4 tsp paprika
- 2 Tbsp olive oil
- Chopped parsley and olives, optional garnish

* Sounds like: húmm-us

** Tahini is ground up sesame seeds, and has the consistency of peanut butter. It sounds like: ta-hée-nee.

Materials

Cutting board and sharp knife, can opener, blender, measuring cups and spoons

Directions

1. Put garlic, lemon juice, salt, and 1 cup of chick peas into blender. Add 2 Tbsp of water, and blend until smooth.
2. Add second cup of chick peas and 2 Tbsp of cold water. Blend until smooth.
3. Add tahini and blend again until smooth. If you want creamier hummus, add an additional Tbsp of water.
4. Scoop hummus into a shallow bowl. Smooth over the top of the hummus with a flattened knife. Sprinkle the hummus with paprika and then drizzle the olive oil.

Optional: Garnish with chopped parsley and olives

Serve with pita bread or cut up raw vegetables.

Hummus will last for several days in the refrigerator.
